Dorothy L. Sayers: Her Life and Soul

Mystery writer Dorothy Sayers is loved and remembered, most notably, for the creation of sleuths Lord Peter Wimsey and Harriet Vane. As this biography attests, Sayers was also one of the first women to be awarded a degree from Oxford, a playwright, and an essayist--but also a woman with personal joys and tragedies. Here, Reynolds, a close friend of Sayers, presents a convincing and balanced portrait of one of the 20th century's most brilliant, creative women. 30 b&w photos.

Review 3:

Well written bio by a friend and writer who knew DLS and worked with her. But it fell just short for me in unlocking the life of DLS--can't pin down the reason. Still, well worth reading about this fascinating woman.

Review 4:

Fascinating book about a fascinating person. I have to follow up the author's assertion that Sayers was not anti-Semitic. I had read to the contrary.

Review 5:

The story of a remarkable woman who began her career as a writer writing advertisements, progressed to mysteries (Creating Lord Peter Whimsey), concluding with religious writings and finally completing a landmark translation of Dante's "Inferno". It is the story of an amazing woman, who always insisted on the inclusion of the "L" when her name was written, took a similar firm stand on the progression of her career and her life. Frequently writers who see themselves as classic academics or gifted word smiths who have been forced to support themselves early in their careers by writing advertisements or mysteries call this work a prostitution of their gifts. Not so Sayers, er...Dorothy L. Sayers. She believed she could not reach the highlights of "The Man Who Would Be King" or the translation of Dante without the former work of creating the Guinness Toucan ad or gallant Lord Peter Whimsey. She believed the gift of creativity, the act of creation in each of us is a gift of God. Her book, Mind of the Maker, states this proposition clearly. Dorothy L. Sayers was a gifted, unique individual who sought, and I think successfully found, an understanding of her gifts and channeled those gifts into very meaningful contributions to an understanding of our relationship with God.
